

if clean, as it is promising. I will attack Coggia with the little prism, & let you know the result. Unfortunately a great tree has all along prevented my leveling the big gun at him & I have only seen him with a binocular field glass. Witt tells me he is a beautiful fellow, the nucleus throwing out a kind of cock's comb of jets. -

Whence, the continuous spectrum?
Hardly gas? How can we conceive it sufficiently condensed? I see Konkoly find the "marsh gas" spectrum - of course in the coma. What wonders these objects are! I do hope your Hayfower is passing off. I have had a touch of it - but nothing like your annoyance.

Ever your affect. friend,

J. W. Webb

Very many thanks for the book which I return today, if I have time. "Nature" has also sent it me for review.